ENC Executive Director Bo Glover

Join Environmental Nature Center Executive Director Bo Glover for FIRE 101 to learn about the basics of fire starting on November 11 from 2 to 6 p.m.

Building and maintaining a fire is an essential survival skill. It can provide you warmth, dry wet clothes, keep insects away, signal for rescue, boil untreated water and cook food. Along with survival necessities, fire also creates a sense of community. Glover will explain where to build a fire, what materials to use and which type of structure to build. As the sun sets, the pressure will be on to get your friction fire started!

Participants will make their own fires to cook with (dinner is included!). This program is for individuals, couples and families with kids nine years of age or older. Bring a fixed blade knife and come dressed for the weather – the program will occur outside, and it is rain or shine!

Cost: $20 for ENC members, $30 for non-members. To register and pre-pay, visit www.encycenter.org.
